

Governor M. Jodi Rell today announced that another television show is moving its production to Connecticut – the syndicated daily game show “Deal or No Deal” will begin taping at the Studios of Sonalysts, Inc. in Waterford this summer.

“I’ll never say ‘No deal’ when there’s a real shot at growing jobs and improving the economic outlook for our state,” Governor Rell said. “This is tremendous news for Connecticut and its ever-growing film and television industry. We’ve done everything we can to make our state an attractive and economically smart place to make good film and TV – and you can see it paying off.”
