

Governor M. Jodi Rell today announced she is allocating $14 million the state earned from the regional auctions of emission allowances to state, municipal, private and nonprofit agencies that promote energy conservation and help fund clean and renewable energy programs. “We can all take pride knowing Connecticut leads the nation and the world in our clean air efforts,” Governor Rell said. “The revenue from these auctions will further strengthen and expand our efforts to reduce our dependence on fossil fuel and limit these dangerous emissions. Ultimately we will leave a cleaner, healthier environment for future generations.”
