

Governor M. Jodi Rell today joined the Governors of Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Vermont and Wisconsin and members of the Obama Administration for a teleconference to discuss the novel H1N1 influenza outbreak and planning for the fall “flu season.”

During today’s meeting, U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said that the Obama Administration would be announcing on Friday the details of a plan to make $350 million available to the states for assistance in preparing for the fall flu season, including a nationwide vaccination program.
