

Governor M. Jodi Rell announced today she has written to the governor of Kentucky, to offer Connecticut's help in providing emergency supplies in the aftermath of a last week's deadly ice storm.

Kentucky Governor Steve Beshear has called it the biggest natural disaster in the state's history. In her letter today, Governor Rell said that "Connecticut stands ready to help in any way we can." Governor Rell assured the Kentucky governor that if he accepts her offer of help, she could turn to Connecticut residents for donations of bottled water, toiletries, blankets and other emergency supplies.
