Strategic Opportunities for Economic Development in Old Lyme

July 1, 2020

A report for the 2019 O. L. Economic Development Commission, based on:
- Market and Economic Study
- Resident & Business Survey
- Workshops & SWOT Analysis

Major findings:
- Without new effort, business stagnant
- Majority (80%) want change on Halls Road
- New development must look like Old Lyme (rural, small town New England, e.g. Lyme Street)

Other findings:
- Arts heritage, beautiful setting are attractions
- New housing types needed (92% currently single-family houses)
- Foot traffic, browsing, good for retail
- Connect Halls Road with Arts Dist./Lyme St.
- Change the experience of visiting Halls Road
Every 10 years the Old Lyme Planning Commission publishes their recommendations for the town in the Plan of Conservation & Development (POCD).

In 2010 & 2020 the POCD continues to recommend smaller apartments for younger and elderly residents.

The 2020 publication also points out the need for design regulations beyond the Sound View Village District.

Looking to the Future 2020 POCD
Residential and Development Recommendations
2. The Zoning Commission should assure that zoning regulations make adequate provision for a diversity of housing types, including smaller apartments for young and old residents, singles and elderly; consider expansion of provisions for accessory apartments; develop regulations to allow life care and independent living facilities for the elderly or disabled, within residential districts by special permit; and create Zoning Regulations for Accessory Housing that are less restrictive to encourage and allow for multi generational living. (Action: Zoning Commission) p. 21

Although the Zoning Commission makes an attempt to gain cooperation of developers to achieve a level of design compatible with the town’s character, there are no regulations in place mandating such action except in the Sound View Village District. (Action: Zoning Commission, Historic District Commission) p. 23
Why rezone Halls Road?

- Commercial-only zoning encourages highway-centric development. Residents want their town center to respond to their needs, not highway needs.

- Halls Road Master Plan encourages new development along Halls Road with the look and feel of historic Old Lyme that follows design guidelines set out for the new zoning district.

- A mix of retail and residential development will increase the town’s tax base and concentrate any additional services in one district.

- New housing types (apartments over shops, town houses, condos, ...) respond to the demand from older and younger residents.

- A majority of residents want more shops and restaurants as well as a place to gather and mix with neighbors. The Halls Road Village District provides that.

- Chance meetings with friends and neighbors is something you can’t get on the internet.

What a Halls Road Village District will allow and promote:

- New development to reflect the look and feel found on Lyme Street through Design Guideline reviews
- A mix of uses including shops, cafes, apartments, town houses, condos, and offices
- Revised setbacks to encourage building close to Halls Road with parking along side or behind
- Specific height and density regulations appropriate for the district based on building placement along Halls Road
- More control over development types and uses
Summary – Why is this important for the Town?

• The town must choose between planning its own future versus allowing its future to be decided by outsiders. These changes will both enable and guide a better future for Halls Road.

• Amid growing challenges to bricks-and-mortar retail, a village district promotes a vibrant, mixed-use town center in Old Lyme -- the most attractive and resilient setting for 21st century retail.

• The plan is in line with recommendations of both outside professionals (e.g. Advance CT, BSC, etc.) and our town’s own Planning Commission. Zoning changes are crucial to meet changing demand and market conditions, and to prepare Halls Road for a changing future.

• Sidewalks and road improvements will be empty gestures if there is no “there” there on Halls Road. These changes support the creation of a vibrant town center, attractive on many levels.

• The plan both encourages and contains new development of much-needed housing types, which will increase town tax revenues.
